Photographer Alec Soth's latest show features recent large-scale color portraits and interior shots. Titled "I Know How Furiously Your Heart Is Beating," the show meditates on representations of individuals and the photographic subjects' relationships to the image-maker. Soth has said of the project, which has been about a year in the making, "It's simply about walking into another person's room and beholding the fragile, enigmatic beauty of another person's life."
