

SEANKELLY

Sands, Roger. "Top Five New York City Virtual Cultural Experiences." Forbes.
March 20, 2020.

Forbes

Despite much of the world remaining on lockdown, people's thirst for culture has not diminished one bit. In fact, one could argue that it has grown stronger than ever the result of everyone searching for ways to occupy their time, and online cultural experiences can fill the void. Sure, visiting a museum online or enjoying the robust sounds of a virtual opera performance can't quite compare to being there in person. However, for many it sure beats being glued to the TV or spending all day with social media. Cultural institutions in New York City, a world epicenter for the arts, along with others are doing their fair share to assist culturally-deprived individuals by providing some excellent online events. Also, visit Google Arts & Culture for additional options.

Jepe Curth, standing, and Mattis Curth, co-founders of Artland. ARTLAND

Artland

Artland, a worldwide online art community platform that connects collectors, art lovers and galleries, is currently featuring an exhibition of leading contemporary talent Julian Charriere, Towards No Earthly Pole, at Sean Kelly NY. Artland provides art lovers of all kinds with the world's largest library of 3D exhibitions and access to the biggest digital database of private art collections in the world. In collaboration with over 500 galleries, they have created more than a thousand 3D Tours which makes it possible to visit gallery exhibitions worldwide virtually, even while at home on the couch. Current shows, emerging talent, archived shows and modern masters can all be experienced in their original exhibition context, including shows in New York, London, Paris, Berlin, Milan, Brussels, Seoul, Copenhagen and over 30 other cities around the world.