Jose Dávila

Frieze Sculpture
Rockefeller Center, New York
April 25 - June 28, 2019

Jose Dávila's installation for the inaugural Frieze Sculpture in New York is the largest sculpture in his series titled Joint Effort. Often described as "totems", marking early civilizations' efforts to materialize a tangible link between Earth and Heaven, here Dávila operates in a similarly symbolic manner. Joint Effort merges natural stone, one of the most basic and primitive construction elements, with concrete volumes—a highly malleable modern material that can conform to any kind of shape—to achieve a functional articulation of a constructive hybrid. For Dávila, this contrast condenses the essence of construction and its constant transformation throughout history. Displayed at Rockefeller Center among the urban architecture of New York City, these associations become even more relevant as Joint Effort resonates with the verticality of the city's skyline.
